Acknowledgments

This is the fourth of a series of new-style county histories which will ultimately embrace all of the 3,103 counties in the United States. The project is known as the American Aerial County History Series.

In the preparation of this work on Vermilion County, Illinois, the author and publisher hereby acknowledge their gratitude, for advice and assistance given them, to Mr. Joseph Wolf and Mrs. Ellen Chase of the Newberry Library, Chicago; to Mr. Herbert H. Hewitt, Mrs. Roberta Sutton and Miss Winifred Baum, all of the Chicago Public Library, Chicago; and to various librarians, public officials, business executives and private citizens of the city of Danville and the county of Vermilion, Illinois. The author was also given editorial assistance by his wife Marion Neville Drury.

Grateful acknowledgment is also accorded here to officials of the U.S. Department of Commerce Bureau of Public Roads and the Department of Public Works & Planning of the State of Illinois, in particular to those in charge of that department's Bureau of Research and Planning in the Highway Division, for permission to use the county map included in this book.

Sources used by the author in preparing this book were: History of Vermilion County, by H. W. Beckwith (Chicago, 1879); Illinois: A Descriptive and Historical Guide, the American Guide Series, (A. C. STORY OF VERMILION COUNTY, ILLINOIS

In the rich farming and coal-mining region of east central Illinois lies Vermilion County, the seat of which, Danville, is the eighteenth largest city in the Prairie State. Within the county is located Kickapoo State Park, a scenic recreation area of more than 1,500 acres that once was pock-marked by 'open' coal mines. It is regarded as an outstanding achievement in reclamation.

Another unique reclamation achievement in the county is Lake Vermilion, an artificial lake lying just west of the city of Danville. It is eight miles long and nearly a mile wide. In addition to offering opportunities for boating, fishing and swimming, Lake Vermilion serves as a reservoir, having a capacity of 2,500,000,000 gallons of water.

It was near the city limits of Danville that, in 1898, the federal government built a branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Used continuously since then, this large institution is now the Danville Veterans' Administration Facility and cares for some 2,000 patients.

Historically, Vermilion County is renowned as one of the several 'Abraham Lincoln Counties' in central Illinois. It was at Danville that Lincoln maintained a law office for several years in partnership with Ward Hill Lamon, pioneer Danville attorney. Here, too, at a later time lived 'Uncle Joe' Cannon, perhaps America's most celebrated congressman during the early decades of the present century.

One of the first and best-known settlers of Vermilion County was Gurdon S. Hubbard. After setting up an Indian trading post in Danville, Hubbard made use of what afterwards became known as 'Hubbard's Trail' between Danville and Chicago, a route his pack horses followed in carrying produce and merchandise between the two settlements. Later, Gurdon S. Hubbard moved to Chicago and became that city's first merchant as well as one of its founding fathers.

"A FINE RED EARTH"

An early visitor to the future site of Vermilion County was Colonel George Croghan, the great frontiersman and Indian agent in the period before the American Revolution. He came in 1765, ten years before the thirteen American colonies revolted from England. In one of his journals Colonel Croghan noted that the Vermilion River "is so called from a fine red earth found here by the Indians, with which they paint themselves." It was from the Vermilion River that the county later obtained its name. But Colonel Croghan said nothing in his journal concerning the salines that lay just west of the Indian town which occupied the future site of Danville. It was these salt wells that were of more importance to the Indians than the 'fine red earth,' and it was these salt wells, too, that attracted the first white settlers of the region that afterwards became Vermilion County.

A KICKAPOO TOWN

Before the coming of the white man to future Vermilion County there existed a sizable town of Kickapoo Indians at the junction of the north and south forks of the Vermilion River. It grew up, as we have said, around the salines that once were extensive in this region. Another aspect of the place that attracted the Indians was the frequent appearance of buffalo and other wild animals. Lured to the area by a desire for salt, these animals provided an easy and plentiful supply of food for the resident Kickapoos. At the time this part of Illinois, and of the Midwest, was under French control, the salines here were often visited by French traders as they journeyed up and down the nearby Wabash River in Indiana.

JOSEPH BARRON ARRIVES

The first American to explore the 'Vermilion Salines,' as they were sometimes called, was Joseph Barron, interpreter of Indian dialects for General William Henry Harrison. He is said to have visited the Vermilion River region in 1801, which was just a year after the Territory of Indiana was organized, with General Harrison as its first governor. At that time Indiana Territory included what is now Illinois. Although Joseph Barron realized the commercial possibilities of the Vermilion River salines, he made no move to develop them. After all, they were in the hands of the Kickapoos. But nearly twenty years later Barron returned to the salines and began the manufacture of salt in the Vermilion River area.

"HARRISON PURCHASE"

Near the present village of Ridge Farm, in the southeast corner of Vermilion County, there is a small tract of land known as the 'Harrison Purchase.' It was here that Governor William Henry Harrison began negotiations with the Indians in 1809 that resulted in the Treaty of Fort Wayne—a treaty in which Harrison bought, for $10,000 and a small annuity, some 3,000,000 acres of land in the southern part of Indiana. The 'Harrison Purchase' tract is in Elwood Township, not far from the Indiana line. A boulder with an historical tablet on it was placed here in 1927 by the Women's Club of Ridge Farm.

CLAIM-JUMPERS AT THE SALINES

In the same year as the 'Harrison Purchase' (1809), the Illinois country was separated from Indiana and became the Territory of Illinois. Left undisturbed, however, in the new territory were the Kickapoos of the Vermilion River region. And here they remained until Illinois was admitted to statehood in 1818. In the following year the Kickapoos ceded a large area of land, including what is now Vermilion County, to the federal government, and immediately afterwards departed from the east central Illinois area.

As soon as the Indians left, Joseph Barron re-appeared at the Vermilion Salines. But this time he was at the head of an expedition which planned on developing the salt resources of the area. With him were Truman Blackman, Lambert Bona, Zachariah Cicott and four Indians of the Shawnee tribe. With the Indians as guides, Barron and his associates tested numerous salt wells in the vicinity and decided they could be developed commercially. He and his associates then returned to Fort Harrison (Terre Haute) for iron kettles and other salt-making equipment.

A month after the Barron party arrived back at Fort Harrison, however, one of its members, Truman Blackman, secretly organized a second expedition to the Vermilion Salines. It was composed of five men who had not been in the original Barron group. On arrival at the salines, Truman Blackman promised to include each of his followers as a partner in an elaborate salt-manufacturing establishment.

Then he set out on an overland journey to the Illinois state capital at Vandalia, his purpose being to obtain a state permit to develop the salt resources of future Vermilion County. But instead of securing the permit in the name of Joseph Barron, or in the names of the men of the second expedition, Blackman got sole rights to the project in his own name only.

When news of this claim-jumping move reached Barron at Fort Harrison and the duped men that Blackman had left at the Vermilion Salines, they took immediate action to nullify Blackman's permit. A legal battle followed, and, after many affidavits were taken and writs issued, was not settled until 1824. In that year, to the satisfaction of all parties, Major John W. Vance was granted exclusive rights to the development of the salines.

SALT FOR THE WABASH VALLEY

Some idea of how eager were the early settlers of the Wabash River country for the setting up of a salt works on the Vermilion may be gained from a letter written in 1820 by James McCall, of Vincennes, Indiana, and addressed to Shadrach Bond, first governor of Illinois. Among other things, McCall said: "The people of the eastern section of your state are very anxious that the manufacture of salt might be gone into. Appearances at the Vermilion salines justify the belief that salt may be made north of . . . this which would be sufficient for the consumption of all the settlers on the Wabash, and much below the present prices. Nearly all of the salt consumed above the mouth of the Wabash is furnished by Kentucky, and the transportation so far up streams materially enhances the price, and in the present undeveloped state of the country as to money, prevents a majority of the farmers from procuring the quantity of this necessary article that their stock, etc., requires."

SALT WORKS ESTABLISHED

It was not until Major John W. Vance appeared on the scene in 1824 that full development of the Vermilion Salines occurred. Arriving in the spring of that year with twenty-four large iron kettles for boiling down salt water, bringing these in "bateaus" up the Wabash River from Louisville, Major Vance soon had a busy Salt Works in operation near the mouth of Stony Creek, about four miles southeast of future Danville. At the time that settlers were coming to the Salt Works here from points almost 200 miles away, Major Vance had increased his plant to eighty kettles, each with a capacity of 140 gallons.

We are told that it required 100 gallons of brine water to make a bushel of salt. An average week's run of salt at Vance's establishment was from sixty to eighty bushels. Prices paid at the Works were from $1.25 to $1.50 per bushel. Much of the salt produced here was shipped down the Vermilion and Wabash rivers to settlers in southern Indiana and Illinois. A considerable amount, also, was carried away in wagons to distant log villages on the Sangamon and Illinois rivers. After a decade or two, however, salt deposits were found in other parts of the Midwest and in time the Vermilion Salines proved unprofitable and were eventually abandoned by Major Vance and others.

FIRST WHITE SETTLER

Believed to have been the first permanent white settler of future Vermilion County was Seymour Treat. He arrived in the early part of November, 1819, and located near the salines then receiving the attention of Joseph Barron and Truman Blackman. With the assistance of several men of the salt-exploring parties, Seymour Treat built a log cabin and moved into it with his wife and children.

"In this way and at this place," says an old county historical work, "began the first permanent settlement within the present limits of Vermilion county. Mr. Treat's family suffered all the privations incident to their situation. Their nearest neighbors were on North Arm Prairie, some forty miles away. The old Kickapoo town, a mile below their cabin, was deserted."

EARLY QUAKER COLONY

One of the earliest, if not the first, Quaker colonies in Illinois was established at what is now Vermilion Grove, a village in Elwood Township in the southeast corner of the county. This settlement was started in 1821 with the arrival of John Haworth, a zealous member of the Society of Friends. Soon he was joined by his uncle, George Haworth, also a devout Quaker, and by Henry Canady, another active member of the same faith. It was these men who provided a firm foundation for the Society of Friends in Elwood Township. The township was named after Thomas Elwood, noted English writer and authority on the Quaker faith.

"BUTLER'S POINT"

On record as the second permanent settler of Vermilion County is James D. Butler, a sturdy and industrious Vermonter who came to this region in 1820, or a year after Seymour Treat built his cabin near the salines. Butler "took up a claim," or squatted, on land just west of the present village of Catlin, but he afterwards entered this land and became its legal owner. In a few years time additional newcomers settled on land near the Butler farm and eventually the place came to be known as 'Butler's Point.' By now, however, other settlements were appearing in the countryside, principally on the Little Vermilion River south of the future site of Danville.

VERMILION COUNTY ORGANIZED

By the year 1826 there were a sufficient number of settlers in the region to justify the formation of a new county. At this time, what is now Vermilion County was part of Edgar County. After concerted demands by the dwellers in the northern part of Edgar County, most of whom lived in log settlements on the Vermilions, the Illinois state legislature at the then capital, Vandalia, passed an act on January 18, 1826, creating a new county to be called 'Vermilion.' When Vermilion County thus came into being, it embraced a much larger territory than the present county; it included what are now Champaign, Iroquois and Ford counties. At that time, of course, this vast region was sparsely settled and new Illinois counties were always much larger than they are today.

COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED

In creating Vermilion County, the state legislature provided that three temporary commissioners from outside the new county be appointed to select a county seat for Vermilion. The three men who received these appointments were John Boyd and Joel Phelps, both of Crawford County, and Samuel Prevo, of Clark County. They were directed by the state legislature to meet in the home of James D. Butler, at 'Butler's Point,' and there decide on a suitable county seat. Butler's home was also designated as a temporary courthouse, to be used until such time as the new county erected a public building of its own.

SELECTION DISAPPROVED

When Boyd and his fellow commissioners selected the Salt Works as a site for the new county seat, a loud protest was voiced by the settlers of the county. Located about six miles west of where Danville was later established, the Salt Works at this time consisted of a log settlement of about twelve cabins and a tavern. It was not a likely place for a county seat, said the citizens of the region. Heartily in agreement with the citizens was Major John W. Vance, lessee of the Salt Works. When Major Vance refused to yield his rights to the salines, residents of the county acclaimed him for this stand. There followed a petition to the Illinois legislature calling for the appointment of a new group of commissioners to select another site for the county seat.

DANVILLE FOUNDED

In December of 1826 the state legislature appointed a new temporary board of commissioners consisting of William Morgan, Zachariah Peter and John Kirkpatrick, all of Sangamon County. On the 31st of January, 1827, these commissioners decided "That, in their opinion, the land donated by Guy W. Smith and Dan W. Beckwith, near the mouth of the North Fork of the Vermilion River, was the most suitable place in the county for such a county seat."

Thus was born Danville, county seat of Vermilion and eighteenth largest city in Illinois. The land donated by Beckwith and Smith, totalling 100 acres, was located about six miles east of the Salt Works and was declared by most residents to be ideal for a county seat town. Both donors of the tract were early settlers of Vermilion County.

By now, Vermilion's first permanent board of county commissioners was functioning. It consisted of James D. Butler, John D. Alexander and Achilles Morgan. One of the first acts of this board was to appoint Dan W. Beckwith as county surveyor, he having had previous experience in this field. Beckwith was then ordered to lay out town lots in the new county seat, and these were to be offered at public sale on April 10, 1827.

Finally, Vermilion's first board of county commissioners ordered that the new county seat be named 'Danville' after the given name of Dan W. Beckwith. It is pointed out by local historians that Beckwith's first name never was 'Daniel;' that, legally, it was simply 'Dan.' He was born and reared in Pennsylvania, and, on reaching maturity, settled in Vermilion County, being among the first to arrive there.

SALE OF TOWN LOTS

At the public sale of town lots in newly-laid out Danville on April 10, 1827, a total of forty-two lots were sold at an average price of about $22.00 per lot. Most of these lots were on Vermilion and Main streets in the vicinity of the new public square—an area that today is the most valuable part of Danville, worth millions of dollars. But in that 1827 sale the county realized a mere $922.087. The auctioneer at the sale was Harvey Luddington, one of the early settlers. When the sale was about over, and due perhaps to the warm, sunny spring day, there appeared among the buyers quite a few rattlesnakes, these having come out of their dens in the limestone crevices along the river at the foot of what is now Clark Street. Almost immediately, a 'snake hunt' was organized among the lot bidders, and before the afternoon was over about seventy-five or eighty snakes of all types had been killed. Some of them were over six feet long. That was about the last seen of such a large turn-out of snakes after white settlement of the region began early in the nineteenth century.

THE "WINNEBAGO SCARE" OF 1827

In the same year that Danville was founded, people in the scattered settlements and villages of Illinois became alarmed over a threatened uprising of the Winnebago tribe of Indians in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. When word was brought to Fort Dearborn at Chicago that the Winnebagoes were on the warpath, Gurdon S. Hubbard, then a fur trader who happened to be visiting in Chicago, quickly mounted his horse and headed south for Danville to sound an alarm.

It was rumored that the Winnebagoes were about to stage another massacre at Chicago, one like the Fort Dearborn Massacre during the War of 1812. And so Hubbard hurried southward over the route that later was known as "Hubbard's Trail." He reached Danville a day or two later, spread the alarm, helped to organize a militia company, and, at the head of fifty mounted and armed men, once more was on the Hubbard Trail, hurrying towards the relief of the settlers around Fort Dearborn.

At Fort Dearborn, which had not been occupied by federal troops for several years, the 'Vermilion County Battalion' stood guard for seven or eight days. When the 'scare' failed to develop into a general Indian war, the Vermilion County militiamen returned to Danville—but not before they had been treated to generous portions of whiskey by the grateful settlers at Chicago.

GEORGETOWN IS BORN

Two months after Danville was founded in 1827 there was laid out the village of Georgetown, which today is a city of 3,294 population. The man who platted Georgetown was James Haworth, an early settler of Georgetown Township. He is said to have named the village after his crippled son, George, although another same year numerous strip mines, with a total of 102 employees, produced 884,000 tons of coal.

In 1950 the population of Vermilion County was 87,079. Of this number, 37,864 lived within the corporate limits of the city of Danville. But the population of the Danville 'city zone,' which, besides the city itself, includes Westville, Central Park, Tilton, Belgium, Lake Addition and the remainder of Danville Township, was shown to be 53,427. The same figures revealed there were 27,112 housing units in the county and 12,523 in the city of Danville.

Located 135 miles south of Chicago, 210 miles northeast of St. Louis and 95 miles west of Indianapolis, the city of Danville is the eighteenth largest city in Illinois. It is mainly a manufacturing center. Within the city zone are eighty-five manufacturing plants employing a total of 8,716 workers and paying wages amounting to $19,313,439.06 annually. The principal articles manufactured are foundry castings, railroad equipment, lift trucks and hardware.

Among the leading manufacturing plants of Danville and vicinity are the General Motors Corporation (foundry castings), employing 2,100 men. General Electric Company (ballasts for fluorescent lights), with 960 employees; Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad shops, with 580 employees; Hyster Company (lift trucks), with 457 employees; Allith-Prouty Company (castings and machine work), with 350 employees; F. L. Jacobs Company (auto seat springs), with 400 employees; and the Recording & Statistical Company (printing of insurance policies), with 250 employees.

Additional plants are the Lauhoff Grain Company (grain products), with 230 employees; Industrial Gloves Company (industrial safety wearing apparel), with 155 employees; Coffing Hoist Company (hoists), with 160 employees; Hegler Zinc Company (zinc), with 200 employees; Weathercrest Jackets Company (wearing apparel), with 145 employees; and the Chuckles Candy Company (candy), with 200 employees.

Railroads serving Danville are the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the New York Central, the Wabash and the Big Four. It is also served by such motor freight lines as the Nimz Transportation Company, Hall Freight Lines, Hayes Freight Lines and the North American Van Lines. By air, the city is served by the Ozark Air Lines Company.

In the downtown district of Danville stand the city's three leading banks, with total resources of $53,194,732.18. Deposits amount to $37,579,237.14. In these three institutions savings bank deposits amount to $12,724,930.20. There are 15,119 owners of automobiles in Danville.

It was in 1948 that the last U.S. census of business was taken. In that year the 554 stores of Danville, employing a total of 3,614 workers (and with a payroll for the year amounting to $7,190,000), sold $57,901,000 worth of merchandise. But this figure is estimated by business survey agencies to have gone up to $74,000,000 in 1953.

The city's principal shopping district occupies four blocks on Vermilion Street, four blocks on Main Street and two blocks on North Street. Neighborhood shopping centers are at Vermilion and Fairchild streets, and at Main and Bismarck

BLACK HAWK WAR

In the Black Hawk War of 1832 the entire personnel of the Vermilion County Militia took to the field, and, under the command of Colonel Isaac R. Moores, played a commendable part in that conflict. When word was first brought to Danville that Black Hawk and his warriors were descending on the white settlements, Dan Beckwith hastily organized an advance detachment of some thirty mounted men and hurried northward to meet the Indians.

In the meantime, Colonel Moores called out the county militia and in a day or two it was also marching northward. It consisted of 300 mounted men armed with rifles, shotguns, squirrel rifles and flintlock muckets. Among its members were Gurdon S. Hubbard, who supplied several four-horse wagons loaded with provisions, and his brother-in-law, Dr. William Fithian. Another in the Vermilion regiment was Captain Morgan L. Payne.

After Dan Beckwith's advance detachment joined the main body of the Vermilion County Militia, and after the entire command had marched as far northward as Naperville, just west of Chicago, orders were received from the governor of Illinois to proceed no further. A few days later, the Black Hawk War was over and the Vermilion County men were told to return to their homes.

FIRST PERMANENT COURTHOUSE

In the beginning, Vermilion County's earliest boards of commissioners met in various log cabin homes. It was not until 1833, just after the close of the Black Hawk War, that the county completed its first permanent courthouse. The contractor who built it was Gurdon S. Hubbard, who, when the work was done, departed for Chicago.

A two-story edifice of brick construction, this first courthouse stood at the northeast corner of the public square for nearly forty years. It was destroyed by fire in 1872. Not least among the many lawyers who appeared on legal business in this courthouse was Abraham Lincoln, whose then law partner, Ward Hill Lamon, had long been a leading resident of Danville. At that time, Lincoln and Lamon maintained a law office in the old Barnum Building, which stood at the northwest corner of the public square, or where the First National Bank of Danville now is located.

LINCOLN AND THE "ORGMATHORIAL COURT"

A Danville stopping-place for lawyers in Lincoln's time was the McCormack House, an early hotel which stood on the site of the present Grier-Lincoln Hotel at 103 West Main Street. It was in the McCormack House one day, so the story is told, that Attorney Lincoln appeared as a defendant before an 'Orgmathorial Court' of his fellow lawyers. The charge against him was that his fees were too low. When the evidence revealed he was guilty, the future President paid his fine in the form of a gallon of whiskey.

RIDGE FARM IS PLATTED

Now a village of 905 population, Ridge Farm, in the southeast corner of the county, was platted in 1853 by Abraham Smith. He originally settled here in 1839, and soon afterwards laid out a farm. As the 'State Road' between Danville and Paris (in Edgar County) passed in front of his farmhouse, Abraham Smith, we are told, was obliged to 'keep tavern' for stagecoach travelers on the road, there being no other stopping-place for miles in either direction.

REASON HOOTEN'S HOSPITALITY

Although many of the lawyers with whom he was associated imbibed rather freely of the cup that cheers, Abraham Lincoln himself, as all the world knows, was not a drinking man. There was one occasion, however, when the immortal Abraham Lincoln is said to have sipped a little wine—and that occasion was in Vermilion County. It happened, we are told, one day in the 1850's when Lincoln and several of his fellow lawyers were invited to the home of Reason Hooten, a farmer and grape-grower who lived on the outskirts of Danville.

Describing the incident in his 'Life On the Circuit With Lincoln,' Henry C. Whitney, after stating that Lincoln did not drink at all, goes on to say that "once I remember several of us drove out to the residence of Reason Hooten, near Danville, where we were treated to several varieties of home-made wine. A mere sip of each affected Lincoln, and he said comically: 'Fellers, I'm getting drunk.' That was the nearest approach to inebriety I ever saw in him."

ROSSVILLE ESTABLISHED

In the northern portion of the county lies the attractive village of Rossville, with a present-day population of 1,382. It was laid out in 1857 and named after Jacob Ross, an early settler and mill-owner of the region. At one time Ross' Mill served not only as a mill but as a place for meetings and social gatherings. The village of Rossville was platted at the junction of the old 'State Road' (between Danville and Chicago) and the Attica (Indiana) and Bloomington Road. Originally, there was a small settlement here called 'Henpeck,' but the reason for such an odd name as never been ascertained.

DR. WILLIAM FITHIAN

An outstanding personality of early Danville days was Dr. William Fithian. Arriving in Danville (he is recorded as being the first white child born in Cincinnati, Ohio) soon after the city was laid out in 1827, Dr. Fithian became not only one of the county's earliest physicians but also something of a founding father of Danville. In the course of time he entered the real estate field, and later engaged in various other business projects.

One of Dr. Fithian's closest friends was Abraham Lincoln. It was in 1858, while a guest in the Danville home of Dr. Fithian, that Lincoln delivered an impromptu address from the second-floor balcony of the Fithian residence at 116 Gilbert Street. When the Civil War opened, President Lincoln appointed Dr. Fithian to the post of provost marshal of the then Seventh Congressional District, an area which embraced most of the east-central portion of Illinois.

After the war, Dr. Fithian retired to his Gilbert Street residence and lived there until his death in 1890. For many years since then, the historic Fithian home was occupied by Charles Feldkamp and his family. The present-day village of Fithian, with a population of 414, was named after Dr. Fithian.

THE CIVIL WAR

When President Lincoln sounded his call for 75,000 militiamen at the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, the men of Vermilion County were among the first to join the colors. Many of them knew the President personally. And had he not been, only a few years earlier, a practicing attorney in their county seat town of Danville? Had he not maintained a law office in Danville with Ward Hill Lamon?

First military units to be organized in Vermilion County after the fall of Fort Sumter were Companies A, B and D of the 25th Regiment of Illinois Volunteers. In service until 1864, these companies took part in many important battles of the war, including Pea Ridge, Corinth, Chickamauga, Kenesaw Mountain, Stone River, and, finally, the fall of Atlanta.

A month later, five more companies were organized in the county, and these became part of the 35th Regiment of Illinois Volunteers. Elected lieutenant-colonel of this regiment was W. P. Chandler of Danville. At the Battle of Pea Ridge, after the regiment's commander, Colonel Smith, was disabled, Lieutenant-Colonel Chandler was placed in charge. He was later commissioned a full colonel.

The largest number of companies raised in the county—seven—became part of the 125th Regiment of Illinois Volunteers on September 3, 1862. In command of this regiment, when organized, was Colonel Oscar F. Harmon of Danville. Its other officers were James W. Langley, of Champaign, lieutenant-colonel; John B. Lee, of Catlin, major; William Mann, of Danville, adjutant; Levi W. Sanders, chaplain; and Dr. John McElroy, surgeon.

Another Illinois regiment that contained men from Vermilion County was the 37th. The commander of this regiment was Julius White, a personal friend of President Lincoln. The regiment's major was J. C. Black of Danville. It has been said of this regiment's Company K, composed of Vermilion County volunteers, that it was a 'boys' company;' that most of its recruits were hardly of age when they enlisted.

Still another Illinois regiment with a Vermilion County contingent was the 73d. Its companies C and E were composed of men from Georgetown, Fairmount and several other towns in the county. In command of one of these companies was Captain Wilson Burroughs of Fairmount, and at the head of the other was Captain Patterson McNutt of Georgetown.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON

In the years after the Civil War there appeared on the local and national scene 'Uncle Joe' Cannon, perhaps the most celebrated of all Vermilion County residents (Lincoln had never lived in the county). First elected to the national House of Representatives in 1873, he served his last term in that body in 1923. It was from 1901 to 1911, when he served continuously as Speaker of the House of Representatives, that 'Uncle Joe' Cannon attained his greatest fame.

A native of North Carolina, where he studied law, Joseph Gurney Cannon came to Danville sometime before the Civil War, and, in 1861, succeeded Ward Hill Lamon as state's attorney of Vermilion County. Then, in 1873, he was elected to Congress, and it was in that body he subsequently became known throughout the nation. The impressive, Victorian-style residence in which he lived at 418 North Vermilion Street was for many years one of the most familiar landmarks of Danville. He died in this house in 1926 at the age of ninety.

CHICAGO & EASTERN ILLINOIS RAILROAD

One of the most important factors in the development of Vermilion County was the building, through it, of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. This road was completed from Chicago to Danville in 1871. Among residents of the county who were leaders in the building of the railroad were John L. Tincher, Alvan Gilbert and H. W. Beckwith. The last-named afterwards wrote 'A History of Vermilion County,' published in 1879.

Almost solely a Vermilion County project, the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad was built in large measure from public funds raised in the county townships through which it passed. In his historical work, Beckwith tells us that "Danville township voted $72,000 for the construction of the road, and $75,000 for the erection of the carshops, which are located in that city. Ross township also voted $24,000 and Grant township voted $18,000."

HOOPESTON FOUNDED

Among the numerous villages and towns that were built on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad after it was completed, the largest (aside from Danville) is Hoopeston, which today has a population of nearly 6,000. With the construction of the railroad here, three land companies laid out townsites on the Hoope farm, and by 1872 there were seventy-two buildings and 245 residents in the new town. When the Lafayette, Bloomington & Muncie Railroad (now the Nickel Plate Road), was built through Hoopeston, the town expanded even faster than before and soon became the leading trade center of north Vermilion County.

SECOND COURTHOUSE

Immediately after the county's historic first courthouse was destroyed by flames in 1872, plans were made for the construction of a new courthouse on the same site; one that would be larger and more imposing than the previous edifice. A 'courthouse' committee of three members was appointed by the county's Board of Supervisors to arrange for the construction of the new building.

On this committee was H. W. Beckwith, who, as we have seen, was active in promoting the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and who later was to write 'A History of Vermilion County.' His two associates on the committee were members of the Board of Supervisors, Bradley Butterfield, of Butler Township, and Henry Talbot, of Sidell Township. It was this committee that supervised the erection of the county's second courthouse; an ornate three-story building of brick construction with stone trim.

WESTVILLE IS BORN

Laid out in 1873 by William P. West and E. A. West, Westville soon developed into one of the county's leading coal-mining towns. A year before the town was platted, Parker & Ellsworth opened a general store here and continued in business for many years afterwards. A post office was established at Westville in 1876, and the first postmaster was S. W. Dukes. Today, Westville has a population of 3,124.

"A GRAIN ELEVATOR VILLAGE"

Described as a 'grain elevator village,' Alvin was platted in 1876 on a site one mile north of an earlier settlement called Gilbert. It was in 1872 that Gilbert was started around a railroad station built that same year. The name of the settlement honored Alvan Gilbert, a prominent Vermilion County pioneer who had served for eighteen years as chairman of the county's Board of Supervisors.

When a new village was platted north of Gilbert, the postoffice authorities refused to give the name 'Gilbert' to their office in the village, saying it duplicated another Illinois postoffice of the same name. The promoters of the new village then suggested 'Alvan' as a name, and this was accepted by the postal authorities; but for some reason they insisted it be spelled 'Alvin' instead of 'Alvan.'

NATIONAL SOLDIERS' HOME

Shortly after the close of the Spanish-American War of 1898, there was built, on the outskirts of Danville, a branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers. Since 1934, however, it has specialized in neuro-psychiatric hospitalization and is now conducted as a unit of the Veterans' Administration. Some 1,800 patients are cared for at the present time. The institution, consisting of fourteen barracks located around a group of central administrative buildings, is situated on landscaped grounds totalling 535 acres. Grounds and buildings are valued at $3,000,000.

VICTORY MONUMENT AND BRIDGE

Dedicated in 1922 to the men of Vermilion County who died in the first World War, the Victory Monument is one of the outstanding sights of downtown Danville. It is located at West Main Street and Gilbert Avenue. Granite figures of a soldier, sailor, marine and Red Cross nurse stand at the base of the heroic bronze statue of Victory. The monument was designed by the late Lorado Taft, most famous of Illinois sculptors.

A short distance south of the monument is located Victory Memorial Bridge, a reinforced concrete span built across the Vermilion River in 1922. It, too, honors World War I veterans and nurses. The bridge was built at a cost of $1,000,000 and is 1,037 feet long.

KICKAPOO STATE PARK

Seven miles west of Danville lies Kickapoo State Park, maintained by the State of Illinois. It occupies 1,579 acres of scenic land marked by ravines, woods, stone ledges, lagoons and two sizable bodies of water, Emerald Pool and Inland Sea. Boating, fishing, picnicing, camping, hiking and riding facilities are available in the state park. This area was once Vermilion County's principal coal mining region.

LAKE VERMILION

Another outstanding recreation place in the county is Lake Vermilion, a man-made body of water located north of Danville. It was made by the construction of a dam across the North Fork of the Vermilion River. The lake is eight miles long and one mile wide.

At the north end of the lake is Harrison Park, a 233-acre tract presented to the county by the late John H. Harrison of Danville. In addition to wooded grooves the park contains a clubhouse, bridle path and a nine-hole golf course.

"WHO'S WHO" IN VERMILION COUNTY

One of the most prominent of Vermilion County residents today is Judge Walter C. Lindley of Danville. After obtaining his law degree from the University of Illinois, Judge Lindley went to Danville in 1904 and became a member of the law firm of Lindley, Penwell & Lindley, remaining with the firm until 1922. He was a member of the Board of County Commissioners from 1916 to 1920.

In 1922 Judge Lindley was appointed judge of the United States District Court for Eastern Illinois by President Harding. In 1949 he was appointed judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago, a position he still retains. Judge Lindley resides in Danville. At one period he served as president of the Danville Country Club.

Another prominent resident of the county is Judge Casper Platt, who at the present time is holding the judicial seat formerly occupied by Judge Lindley—that of judge of the United States District Court for Eastern Illinois. Judge Platt began the practice of law in Danville in 1916. At a later period he served as Danville city attorney.

Still another Vermilion County resident who has achieved distinction in the legal profession is Paul F. Jones of Danville. He, also, was a former city attorney. At a later period he served as director of the Illinois state insurance department. He is now president of the National Casualty Company.

VERMILION COUNTY TODAY

Having an area of 898 square miles, Vermilion County is today one of the Prairie State's principal agricultural and coal mining counties. In addition, its county seat, Danville, is a leading Illinois manufacturing center. There are 3,202 farms in the county. A recent estimate placed the value of all farm products in the county (including dairy products) at $25,339,394. In 1951 there were fifteen pit mines operating in Vermilion, with a total of 450 men employed in them. In that local story has it that he named the village after George Beckwith, a brother of the Dan Beckwith after whom Danville was named.

Still another local story relates that James Haworth, assisted by his son, measured off town lots on the site of the new village with a grapevine a rod long. He did not want the services of a surveyor because he feared that his plan for a village would be revealed to Nelson Moore, another early resident who was thinking of establishing a village on the same site. "Haworth was more of a man of action than of talk," we are told.

HUBBARD'S TRADING POST

It was in 1828 that the Indian fur trader, Gurdon S. Hubbard, established his trading post in what is said to have been the first frame building in Danville. This structure stood at the southeast corner of Redden Square, where later the Palmer Bank Building was erected. There were still enough Indians left in Illinois and Indiana for Hubbard to do a profitable business. At one period he operated a pack train of as many as fifty horses on the Hubbard Trail between Danville and Chicago.

Hubbard later became convinced that Danville might find a new trade outlet on the Vermilion River. And to prove his point he, in 1831, sent a flatboat loaded with corn, pork and flour down the Vermilion to the Wabash, and thence on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans. But early Danville residents took no further action on this project after Hubbard's sole attempt at carrying it out.

When his Indian trading business began to decline, Hubbard converted his post into a 'white goods' store for the settlers. In time, however, he felt an urge to go to Chicago. And so in 1833 he sold the Danville 'white goods' store to his brother-in-law, Dr. William Fithian, and moved northward to the settlement at Fort Dearborn. A month later, in a letter to Dr. Fithian, Hubbard said: "So far, I have no regret for having moved to the smaller town of Chicago."

HUBBARD TRAIL

At first used by Gurdon S. Hubbard in transporting furs to the American Fur Company station at Chicago, the Hubbard Trail afterwards became known as the 'State Road' when the state of Illinois lengthened it to a point opposite Vincennes, Indiana. At a still later period the State Road was popularly referred to as the 'Vincennes Trace.' As such, it was a trail crowded with Hoosier wagons carrying products to the market at Chicago. Entering Chicago from the south, this historic trail followed present-day Vincennes Avenue in the Lake Michigan metropolis, and completed its route on present-day State Street in the same metropolis. It was because of this that State Street obtained its name.

When the pioneer farmers of the Wabash River country sold their products in the Chicago market, it was their custom to camp for a day or two on the old military reservation where Fort Dearborn had formerly stood. Out of this circumstance arose the name Wabash Avenue for a street that bordered the reservation. The old trail that Gurdon Hubbard originally used, that was afterwards a much-traveled route for Hoosier farmers, is today a leading Illinois highway, State 1. Paralleling it from Chicago to Danville is the right-of-way of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad.

streets. All stores are closed on Monday mornings, but open on Monday evenings. The principal shopping days in Danville are Mondays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Among the department and variety stores of Danville are branches of such national store chains as J. C. Penney Company, Sears Roebuck & Company, Montgomery Ward & Company, F. W. Woolworth Company, S. S. Kresge Company and Butler Brothers. Here, too, are the stores of Meis Bros., Inc., Block & Kuhl Company and Gerry's. Among grocery stores in Danville, the largest number, fifty-three, are operated by the Grab-It-Here Company. Here, also, are two Kroger stores and one A & P Tea Company establishment.

The city's only newspaper, the Danville Commercial-News, is owned by the Gannett national chain. It has an evening circulation of 34,773, a Saturday circulation of 28,231, and a Sunday circulation of 34,857.

The second largest city in the county, Hoopeston, has a population of 7,000 and is a leading center for the canning of sweet corn. Here are located branch plants of the American Can Company and the John Deere Company. A recreation place at Hoopeston is McFerren Park, which has facilities for boating, swimming and picnicing.

CITY OF DANVILLE

As the story of Danville is largely the story of Vermilion County, an account of the birth and rise of that city will be found in the opening narrative of this book. It is the largest city in the county, having a 1950 population of 37,864 within its corporate limits.

It is also the eighteenth largest city in Illinois. In national rank, according to 1950 census figures, Danville is No. 316 in the list of cities in the United States having 25,000 or more inhabitants. Its population increased 2.6 per cent from 1940 to 1950.

Parts of Danville Township were annexed to Danville city in 1940, 1941, 1945 and 1948. These annexations, together with the adjacent communities of Westville, Tilton, Central Park, Belgium, Lake Addition and the remainder of Danville Township, now bring the 'urban zone' population of Danville up to 53,427 inhabi-

JAMESBURG

Lying northwest of Danville, Jamesburg is a village of some fifty inhabitants. Through it runs the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and State Highway 28. Its mail is received from the postoffice at nearby Potomac. Jamesburg is in Blount Township, which was named after an early settler named Blount. Believed to have been the first settler, however, was Samuel Copeland, who arrived in 1828. The population of Blount Township today is 1,232.

HILLERY

TILTON

Located on the southwestern outskirts of Danville city is the village of Tilton, with a 1950 population of 1,638. It is situated on the right-of-way of the Wabash Railroad. Tilton is one of the older communities of Danville Township. The township today (including Danville city) has a total population of 45,888.

CENTRAL PARK

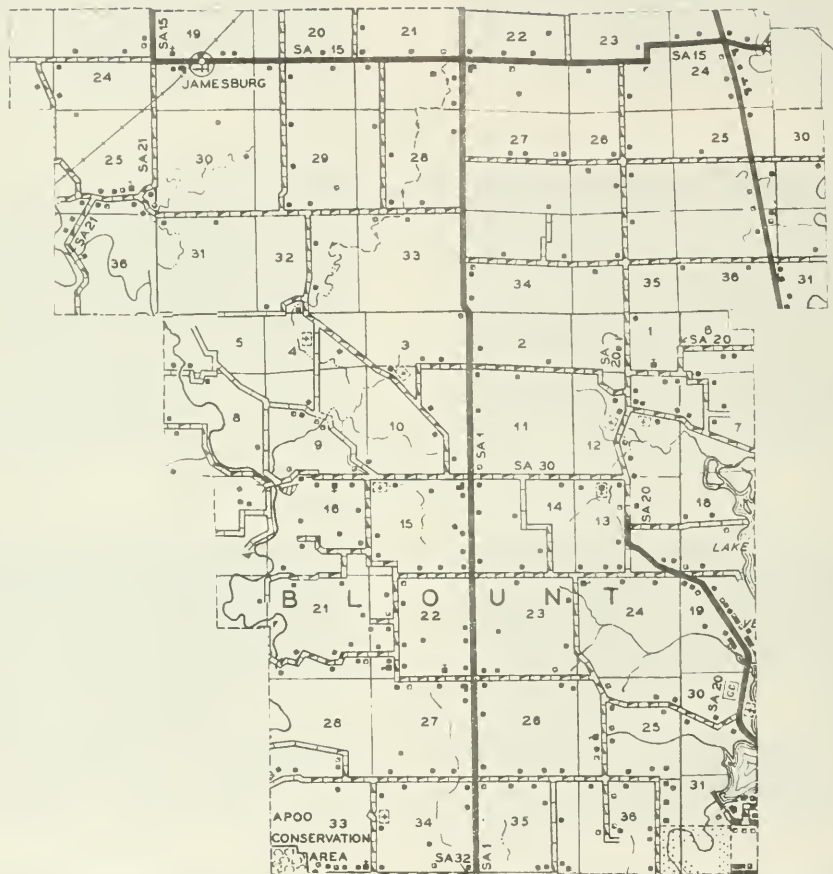

An unincorporated area, Central Park had a 1950 population of 2,489. It is one of the newer residential sections of the Danville urban zone.

VERNAL

A smaller village than Jamesburg in Blount Township is Vernal. It is served by a branch of the Danville postoffice. Not far from Vernal is located Lake Vermilion, an artificial body of water eight miles long and a mile wide.

HEGLER

Another village south of Danville is Hegler. It has a population of 853 and centers on the Hegler Zinc Company plant. Through it runs US 150 and State I.

RANKIN

Rankin, a village of 737 population, is located in the northwest corner of Vermilion County. It is on the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad. It is also at the intersection of state highways 9 and 49. Rankin was founded in 1872 on part of a tract of some 5,000 acres of land owned by W. A. Rankin and David Rankin, early settlers.

This village is the largest community in Butler Township. The township has a total population of 1,847. In addition to the Rankins, other early township settlers were W. H. Pells, William M. Tennery, and J.H. Schwartz and Lewis John.

EAST LYNN

Another village in Blount Township is East Lynn, with a population of 300. It was named after a popular nineteenth century novel, 'East Lynn,' by Mrs. Anna S. Stephens. East Lynn was laid out in 1872.

HUSTLE

Hustle is another Blount Township village. It is served by the postoffice at nearby Potomac. The village is at the intersection of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad.

INDIANOLA

Some sixteen miles south of Danville, near the Little Vermilion River, lies the village of Indianola, with a population of 392. It is one of the oldest communities in the county, having been laid out in 1836 by David Baird and William Swank. The village was at first called Chillicothe, after Swank's home town in Ohio.

Indianola is located in Carroll Township, which has a population of 960. The township is believed to have been named after Charles Carroll of Carrollton, patriot of the American Revolution and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Said to have been the first settler of the township was John Myers, who came in 1821 and who was soon called "Injun' John" by other early settlers.

CATLIN

A village of 953 population, Catlin was platted in 1856 after a station of the Great Western Railroad was built here that same year. The founders of the village were Guy Merrill and Josiah Hunt. Another early developer of the village was Harvey Sandusky.

In pioneer times, the neighborhood in which Catlin was laid out was known as Butler's Point, so-called after James D. Butler, who is considered the second permanent white settler of Vermilion County. The village of Catlin is in Catlin Township, which has a population of 2,099.

RIDGE FARM

At the extreme south end of Vermilion County, on State 1, lies the village of Ridge Farm. It has a population of 905. Ridge Farm is one of the older villages of the county, having been platted in 1853 by Abraham Smith. He named it after an early ridge in the neighborhood.

Ridge Farm is located in Elwood Township, which has a population of 1,879. The township, in which Quakers early settled, derives its name from Thomas Elwood, an English writer and leader of the Society of Friends. Among the first settlers of the township were John Haworth and Henry Canady.

OLIVET

Just north of Ridge Farm, on State 1, is located the village of Olivet. It has a population of 450. Here is situated Olivet College, a co-educational Bible school and college maintained by the Church of the Nazarene.

VERMILION GROVE

Another Elwood Township village is Vermilion Grove, with a population of 125. The first Quaker settlement in Illinois is said to have been established on the site of Vermilion Grove. The village is on the New York Central System.

GEORGETOWN

Principal community of Georgetown Township, south of Danville, is the city of Georgetown, with a 1950 population of 3,294. It is one of the oldest communities in Vermilion County, having been laid out in 1827. Among its first settlers were numerous Quakers who came here from Tennessee and North Carolina because of their dislike of slavery.

Long a familiar landmark in Georgetown, the Star Mill, at 224 Mill Street, was built in 1850, and remained in continuous use until 1929. The first settler of Georgetown Township, which today has a total population of 7,771, was Henry Johnson, who came to the region in 1820. He is regarded as the third permanent white resident of Vermilion County.

HOOPESTON

Second largest city in Vermilion County is Hoopeston, located at the extreme north end of the county. It had a 1950 population of 5,992. But this figure is estimated to have gone up to 6,300 in 1954. Hoopeston is one of the leading canning centers of Illinois. In addition to canneries, the city possesses large branch plants of the American Can Company and the John Deere Company.

It was in 1872, just after the completion of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad through the region, that three land companies platted townsites on the old Hoope farm. Soon afterwards there were 70 buildings and 245 inhabitants in the new village of Hoopeston. It is located in Grant Township, which today has a population of 7,298. The township was named after General U. S. Grant.

WESTVILLE

Another large community in Georgetown Township is Westville, with a population of 3,124. It was platted in 1873 by W. P. and E. A. West. A year before they laid out the village, however, a general store was opened on the site by Parker & Ellsworth, two early merchants of the region.

OAKWOOD

Largest village in Oakwood Township, west of Danville, is Oakwood, with a population of 641. It is on the New York Central System and on US 150 and State 10. The village was laid out in 1870 by Clark R. Griggs and was an early shipping point for the coal mines of the region.

FITHIAN

Named after Dr. William Fithian early Vermilion County settler and friend of Abraham Lincoln's, Fithian village has a present-day population of 414. It, too, is on the New York Central System and on US 150 and State 10. The village was founded in 1870.

RUMPLER

Just west of Fithian lies the hamlet of Rumpler, with a population of seven inhabitants. It is served by the postoffice at Fithian.

BISMARCK

Established more than eighty years ago, Bismarck is another of the South Ross Township villages on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. Originally, the village was called Bismarck Junction.

BATESTOWN

Batestown is a village of 500 population located west of Danville. It is situated on US 150 and State 10. A branch of the Danville postoffice serves Batestown.

ROSSVILLE

Largest village of Ross Township, north of Danville, is Rossville. It has a population of 1,382. The village is located on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and on State 1. It was platted in 1857 at the intersection of the old Chicago-Vincennes and the old Attica-Bloomington roads, two early highways of the area. Both Rossville, and Ross Township, were named after Jacob Ross, a pioneer settler of the countryside. Today, the township has a population of 1,853.

ALVIN

One of the older villages of Vermilion County is Alvin, in South Ross Township. It was platted in 1876. As far back as 1838, however, a grist mill stood on the site of the future village. This mill was operated until the early 1930's. Today, Alvin has a population of 287. It is located on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad.

KNOWLES

Located near Alvin is the village of Knowles. Through it runs the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad. It is served by the postoffice at Alvin.

STARR

Another village in Newell Township is Starr. It is located on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad. The village is served by the postoffice at nearby Alvin (in South Ross Township).

THOMAS

The hamlet of Thomas is situated on the Illinois Central Railroad. It is served by the postoffice at Alvin.

HENNING

Another village in South Ross Township is Henning, with a population of 283. It, also, is on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. The village is incorporated.

MUNCIE

Another village in Oakwood Township is Muncie, with a population of 197. It was platted in 1875 by Edward Coroley. First dwelling to be built in the village was the home of Elisha Henry.

MISSIONFIELD

Some fifty inhabitants live in the hamlet of Missionfield, another Oakwood Township community. It is located on the New York Central System. It is served by the postoffice at Muncie.

NEWTOWN

Not far from Muncie is located the community of Newtown. It has a population of fifty inhabitants. It is served by the postoffice at Muncie.

SIDELL

An incorporated village, Sidell is the largest community of Sidell Township. It has a population of 554. The village is located on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. Both the village of Sidell, and the township in which it is located, were named after John Sidell, who in early days owned an extensive farm in the area. Another large land-owner of the township was Michael Sullivant. Today, the township has a population of 1,264.

FAIRMOUNT

Southwest of Danville, in the Salt Fork area, lies the village of Fairmount, with a population of 618. It is located on the Wabash Railroad. The village is among the oldest in Vermilion County, having been platted in 1856. Its founder was Captain Josiah Hunt, chief engineer of the one-time Great Western Railroad. Fairmount is the only community in Vance Township, which today has a population of 1,154.

ALLERTON

Although part of the village of Allerton is in Champaign County, its main portion lies in Vermilion County. In this portion dwell 244 inhabitants. Allerton is on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad.

ELLIS

Just off State 49, in Middlefork Township, lies the village of Ellis, containing twelve inhabitants. It is on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad. The village is served by the postoffice at nearby Potomac.

BELGIUM

South of Danville, not far from Westville, lies the village of Belgium, with a population of 493. It was incorporated as a village in 1909 and derived its name from the homeland of most of its residents. In the beginning, Belgium was at the center of one of the rich mining areas of Vermilion County.

ILLIANA

Illiana is a village near the Indiana boundary line. It is served by the postoffice at State Line, in Indiana.

FOR REMOVING STAINS.

ALABASTER. Use strong soap and water.

BLACK SILK. Brush and wipe it thoroughly, lay on table with the side intended to show up, sponge with hot coffee strained through muslin;
when partly dry, iron.

TO REMOVE STAINS OR GREASE FROM OIL
PAINT. Use bisulphide of carbon, spirits of turpentine, or if it is dry and old, use chloroform.
These and tar spots can be softened with olive oil and lard.

RUST FROM STEEL. Take half ounce of emery powder mixed with one ounce of soap and rub well.

FRUIT SPOTS FROM COTTONS. Apply cold soap, then touch the spot with a hair pencil or feather dipped in chlorate of soda, dip immediately in cold water.

GREASE FROM SILKS. Take a lump of magnesia, rub it wet on the spot, let it dry, then brush the powder off.

IRON RUST may be removed from white goods
by sour milk.

SCORCH STAINS FROM WHITE LINEN. Lay in bright sun.

MILDEW. Moisten the spot with clean water; rub on it a thick coating of castile soap mixed with chalk scrapings; rub with end of finger, then wash

Points of Constitutional Law.

Congress must meet at least once a year.
Congress may admit as many new states as desired.

One State cannot undo the act of another.
By the Constitution every citizen is guaranteed a speedy trial by jury.

Congress cannot pass a law to punish for a crime already committed.

A person who commits a felony in one State cannot find refuge in another.

Treaties with foreign powers are made by the President and ratified by the Senate.

The territories each have a delegate to Congress who is allowed the privilege of debate, but not the right to vote.

The Vice-President, who ex-officio presides over the Senate has no vote in that body except in case a tie ballot.

If the President holds a bill longer than ten days while Congress is in session it becomes a law without his signature.

An act of Congress cannot become a law over the President's veto except on a two-thirds vote of both houses.

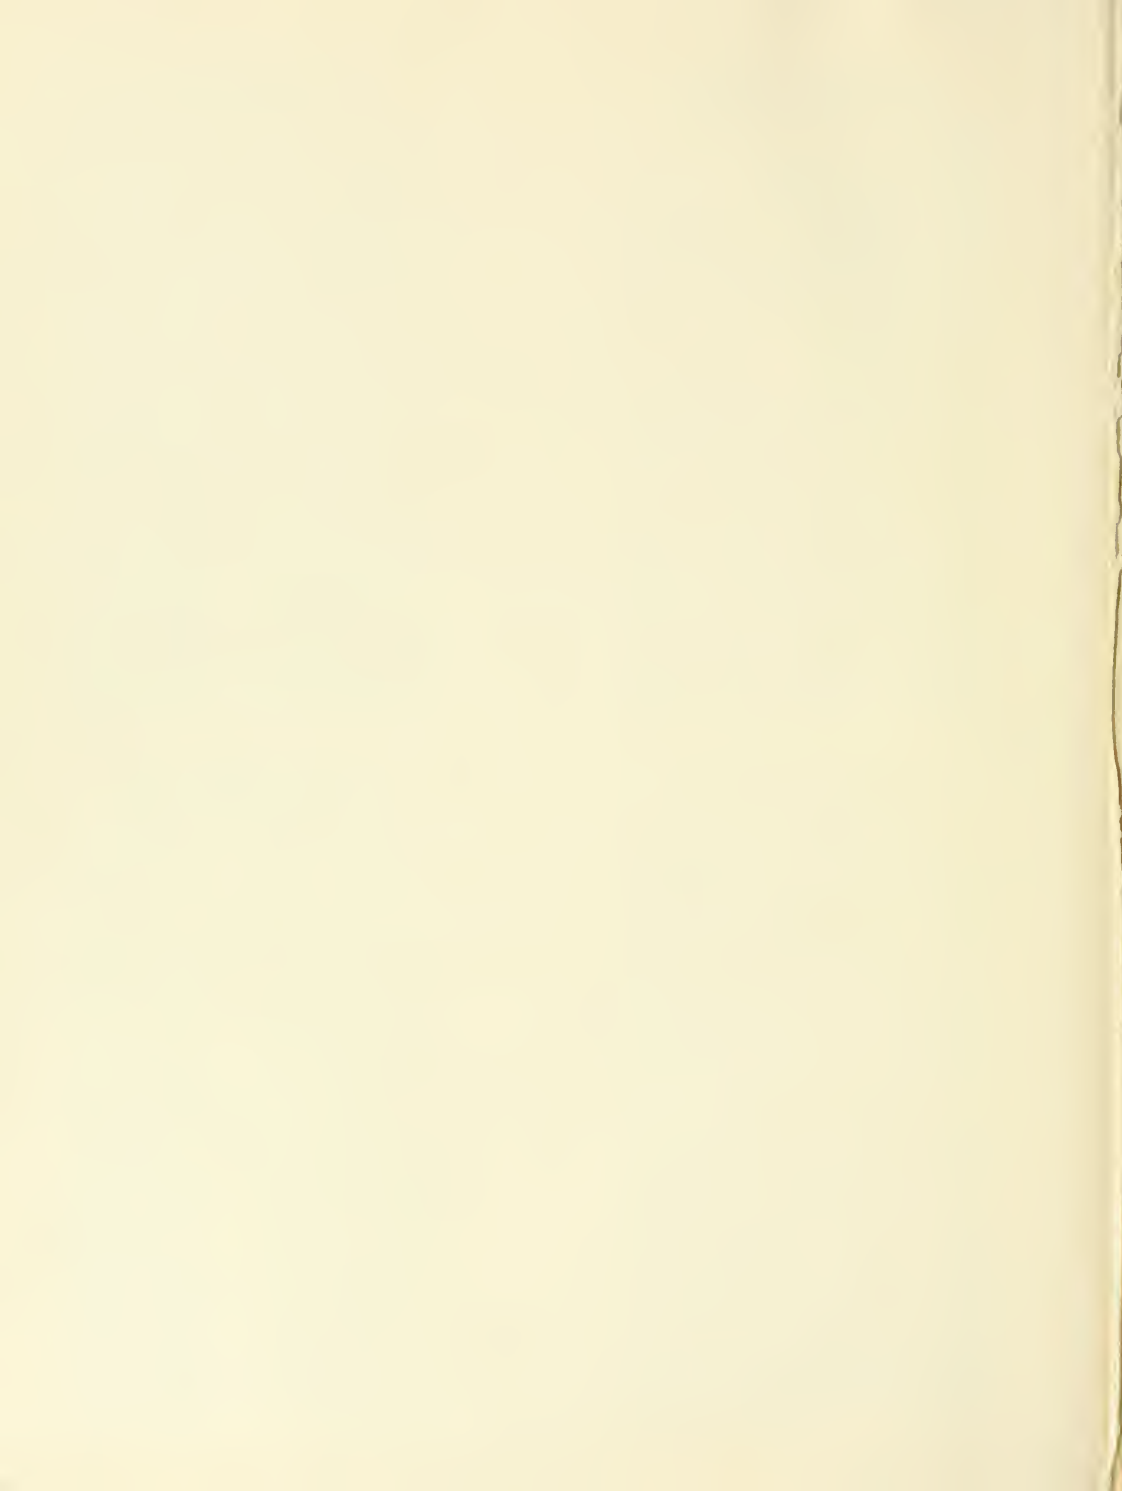

The House of Representatives may impeach the President for any crime, but the Senate has the sole power to try all impeachments.

Amendments to the Constitution of the United States require a two-third vote of each House of Congress, and must be ratified by at least three-fourths of the States.

The President of the United States must be at least 35 years of age; a Senator, 30; a Congressman, 25; The President must have been a resident of the United States fourteen years.

A naturalized citizen is not eligible to the office of President of the United States. A male child born in a foreign land to American parents has an equal chance to become the President with one born on American soil.

The United States shall guarantee to every State a Republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic trouble.
